Competitive Scrub: AI Sales Coaching & Roleplay

Prepared for: Peak Performers Alliance — NEPQ Sales Coach (Richards Supply Edition) Date: October 28, 2026

> About the pricing numbers: Rilla, Siro, Craft, Second Nature and 7Q don't publish their prices. Most of the price ranges below come from third-party write-ups, and several of those write-ups were published by competitors such as SalesAsk, Craft and AdaptClose. Treat these numbers as rough estimates, not confirmed quotes. Amotions is the only company here that publishes its full price list.

1. Executive Summary

- Rilla is the market leader. It's the best-funded company in AI coaching for in-person sales: about $70M in annual recurring revenue (Sacra estimate, April 2026), a valuation of roughly $737–757M, investors including GV and Bessemer, more than 2,000 customer accounts, and a partnership with The Home Depot. It launched AI Roleplay in March 2026, so it now competes directly with your roleplay feature.
- The market has two camps:
- Recording / review tools (Rilla, Siro, SalesAsk, Craft). These record real appointments so managers can review and score them. They're expensive (about $150–$350 per rep per month), usually require an annual contract, and often charge a $1.5K–$5K setup fee.
- Roleplay / practice tools (Hyperbound, Second Nature, Amotions). These are AI practice partners, mostly built for B2B tech sales teams rather than contractors.
- Only one competitor is built on NEPQ: 7Q (7q.ai). It was built in partnership with Jeremy Miner and 7th Level. It scores Zoom, Google Meet and Teams calls against NEPQ, but it doesn't advertise a dedicated roleplay feature, and it isn't focused on contractors.
- Where you fit: No competitor found combines all of the following: NEPQ method + contractor-specific personas + voice roleplay (full and coached) + live call listening + recorded-demo scoring + a CRM tie-in + free access for contractors through Richards Supply. That combination is your opening.

2. Competitor Profiles

Rilla — rilla.com (main threat)

- What it is: Records reps' in-person appointments and coaches them, mainly through "virtual ridealongs" (managers review a 3-minute summary of each appointment).

- Products: Virtual Ridealongs, Rilla Live (real-time coaching), Rilla Intelligence (company-wide analytics), and Roleplay (launched March 18, 2026).
    - Replay builds a practice roleplay from a rep's real recorded call.
    - Training turns uploaded playbooks into roleplay courses.
- Industries: Home improvement, home services (HVAC, plumbing), home building, remodeling, dental, auto, senior living, multifamily. In March 2026 it partnered with Neighborly to sell to plumbers and HVAC technicians.
- Claims on its website: 45% more sales, +40% close rate, +17% ticket size, new-hire training time cut in half. Setup takes "1 hr 45 min."
- Leadership: CEO Sebastian Jimenez, CTO Chris Martin. Advisors include the cofounder of Procore and the founders of Verkada, UiPath and Revolut.
- Price (estimates): About $199–$349 per rep per month (some sources say $3K–$4K per rep per year). 5-seat minimum, paid annually up front, auto-renews, $1.5K–$5K setup fee. Average contract is about $20K per year. Roleplay has been reported as a separate add-on.
- Weaknesses:
    - Too expensive for small contractors.
    - Depends on managers having time to review recordings.
    - Uses each company's own sales process, not a set method like NEPQ.
    - Roleplay is new and thinly documented.
    - Recording customers raises consent issues: 11 states require telling the customer.

Siro — siro.ai (#2 in field-sales recording)

- What it is: A full sales-performance system for in-person, mobile and remote sellers. It's organized around three steps: Run (meeting prep, notes, filling in the CRM), Evaluate (scorecards, reports) and Improve (coaching, playlists, team feed, Roleplay).
- Notable features:
    - "Halftime Mode" gives coaching prompts during natural breaks in an appointment.
    - "Ask Siro" is an AI assistant.
    - Two-way sync with Salesforce, HubSpot, Pipedrive, Dynamics, LeadPerfection and Improveit360.
    - Sold inside ServiceTitan under the name "Field Pro."
    - SOC 2 Type II, HIPAA and GDPR compliant.
- Funding: Raised a $50M Series B in May 2025.
- Price (estimates): About $149–$249 per rep per month, annual contract, $1.5K–$5K setup fee.
- Weaknesses: Like Rilla, it depends on managers reviewing recordings. No NEPQ. Expensive.

SalesAsk — salesask.com

- What it is: AI coaching built for the trades (HVAC, plumbing, roofing, remodeling). Its AI coach, "Coach Dean," sends reps written feedback before their next appointment.
- Roofing focus: Coaching on insurance and deductible conversations, handling "I'm getting three bids," and booking inspections.
- Integrations: ServiceTitan, Jobber, Housecall Pro, Salesforce. Ties conversations to the revenue they bring in.

- Price: Says it charges per rep per month with no seat minimum, no setup fee, and monthly billing available. A directory lists it at about $50–$300 per rep per month.
- Note: SalesAsk publishes a lot of comparison content against Rilla and Siro, so its market claims are self-serving.

Craft (Craft AI) — craftflow.com

- What it is: Coaching for both call-center and field sales, with real-time alerts during calls.
- Integrations: ServiceTitan, Leap, AccuLynx.
- Price (estimates): About $9K–$12K per year minimum (roughly $150–$200 per user per month). Setup takes about 30 days.

7Q — 7q.ai (only NEPQ-based competitor)

- What it is: AI coaching built with Jeremy Miner / 7th Level for NEPQ.
- Features:
  - "AskJeremy" gives coaching during and after calls.
  - NEPQ Intelligence scores each call by phase, from Connection through Commitment.
  - Automatic call capture, meeting summaries, and detection of who's speaking and which stage the call is in.
- Integrations: Zoom, Google Meet, Microsoft Teams, HubSpot, Zapier.
- Target customers: High-ticket closers selling over video and remote calls.
- Price: Not published.
- Gaps: Doesn't advertise a dedicated roleplay feature. No contractor personas. Built for remote and video calls, not field selling.

Amotions AI — amotionsinc.com

- What it is: Real-time coaching that appears privately on the rep's screen during Zoom, Teams or Meet calls, plus AI roleplay and post-call insights. It also markets to roofing.

- Published prices:

Plan	Price per rep / month (billed annually)	Monthly allowance
Basic	Free	Very limited
Starter	$49	11 hrs live coaching, 40 roleplays
Professional	$99	23 hrs live coaching, 100 roleplays
Advanced	$189	44 hrs live coaching, 200 roleplays
Power	$349	81 hrs live coaching, 400 roleplays
Enterprise	Custom	—

Hyperbound — hyperbound.ai

- What it is: AI roleplay for B2B sales development teams doing high-volume cold calling. It has "Screen Comprehension" (it reacts to what's shown on screen in a demo) and "Perform" (links practice results to real deal data).
- Price: Has a free practice tier. Paid seats are about $63–$70 per user per month at 50–150 seats (estimate).
- Relevance to you: Low. It isn't built for contractors.

Second Nature — secondnature.ai

- What it is: Enterprise training platform with 3D avatars, gamified leaderboards and certification programs.
- Price (estimates): About $20K+ per year minimum, roughly $30–$40 per seat. Setup takes 1–2 months.
- Relevance to you: Low. It's built for large companies' training departments.

4. Your Advantages

1. Price. Free to contractors, compared with $2.4K–$4K+ per rep per year at Rilla and Siro. Competitors that require 5 seats lock out small roofing, siding and window shops entirely.
2. NEPQ methodology. Of the competitors reviewed, only 7Q also uses NEPQ, and it's built for remote video calls, not contractors.
3. Practice before real calls. Rilla and Siro mostly coach from recordings of real appointments, which means real customers. Your roleplay lets reps practice on Skeptical Sam or Price-Shopping Pete first.
4. Part of the Richards Supply relationship. Bundled with RichardsCRM and the supplier relationship, which builds loyalty in a way stand-alone software can't.
5. No setup project. It's a widget on a website. No 30-day implementation and no setup fee.

5. Gaps & Threats

1. Rilla Roleplay + Home Depot. Rilla now offers practice, recording and real-time coaching in one product, and it has a big-box retail channel. Watch for a bundled offer through suppliers.
2. No manager view. Every recording-based competitor sells mainly to the manager or owner, with team dashboards, playlists and reviewing every rep on every call. You have none of that today.
3. Field recording. Competitors record in-person kitchen-table appointments through a mobile app. Your Live Listening works through the browser mic, which is fine for phone calls but weaker for in-home appointments.
4. Proof of results. Competitors advertise numbers like "+40% close rate." You need your own early case studies.
5. CRM reach. Competitors connect to ServiceTitan, AccuLynx, Jobber and others. You only connect to RichardsCRM.

6. Recommended Next Moves (by priority)

1. Ship Demo Analysis (upload Teams or Zoom recordings). It's already written, but it needs the `/api/transcribe` endpoint and a redeploy. That puts you on par with Rilla, Siro and 7Q for scoring real calls.
2. Add a simple manager/owner view. Show each rep's daily points, scores over time and their weakest NEPQ phase. This is the main reason companies buy Rilla and Siro.
3. Score by NEPQ phase (Connection → Engagement → Transition → Presentation → Commitment), not just one 10-point number. This matches 7Q's main selling point.
4. Roofing-specific personas: an insurance-claim homeowner, a "getting 3 bids" buyer, and a storm-chaser-wary buyer. This takes on SalesAsk's roofing pitch.
5. "Replay" mode: turn the objections from an uploaded demo into a custom roleplay. This matches Rilla's newest feature.

6. Gather proof: before-and-after close rates from 3–5 Richards Supply contractors.
